‘The goose was good’ said the Duckman, picking his teeth.

‘I’m surprised you et it, what with that duck on your head’ said Coffin Henry, picking his nose.

‘What duck?’ said The Duck man.

‘Arnold had no legs but, since there were many occasions when a boot was handy on the streets, Coffin Henry had fixed one to the end of a pole for him. He was deadly with it, and any muggers hard-pressed enough to try to rob the beggars often found themselves kicked in the head by a man three feet high.’
